LIBRARY FREEDOM PROJECT

LFP IN YOUR LIBRARY!

Bring our expert training and resources directly to your library or organization. Whether in-person or virtual, our flexible workshops are perfect for staff development days and professional conferences. Let's tailor a session for your team!

LFP INTELLECTUAL FREEDOM TRAININGS

Across the country, book challenges have surged tenfold. Anti-LGBT activists storm school and library board meetings, demanding removal of Pride displays. Storytimes face hostile attacks, intimidating children and parents. Legislators propose anti-speech laws that threaten our community and could criminalize librarianship itself. In academic settings, harassment campaigns push dedicated professionals out of their jobs. This is our reality.

WHAT IS LFP?

Library Freedom Project is a network of values-driven librarians working together to build information democracy.

How do we defend ourselves, our communities, and our values? How do we support each other in doing work that matters?

LFP's intellectual freedom trainings equip librarians to stand firm during crisis conditions. We cover practical strategies for organizing against library attacks, helping participants recognize the stakes and energize action around shared values.

Our modular trainings run 1–6 hours and cover:

- Policy implications
- Talking points
- Coalition building
- De-escalation strategies
- Interactive roleplay of real-world challenge scenarios across public, school, and academic libraries

Training costs are on a sliding scale—we'll work within any budget.
